Brush up on your colour theory...

There are two types of primary colours, additive and subtractive. Then there are secondary colours that are made from mixing combinations of the primary colours.

Additive Primary Colours

The additive primary colours are obtained through the light it emits: red, green and blue. The combination of these three results in white.

The secondary colours of these are: cyan, magenta and yellow. They are the result of these combinations.

Subtractive Primary Colours

The subtractive primary colours are the ones associated with the subtraction of light: cyan, magenta and yellow. The combination of these results in black.

The secondary colours of these are: red, green and blue. They are the result of these combinations.
